Things Decidedly NEW

A Revival of Old Jewelry Garnets set in bright gold

The fashionable leaders of New York aristocracy fathom the family vaults to meet the new vogue of garnet jewelry. Almost overnight—these family heirlooms have found themselves amazingly smart.

Hand-in-hand with the revival of the rich lace Bertha comes the revival of the garnet necklace, medallions of deep red gems linked with shining gold. Worn on smooth, white shoulders, such a necklace proves, without a doubt, the aristocracy of one's great grandparents. 35.00

Ears were pierced when "drops" like this were last the fashion. The new fastener is the only thing about them that differs from those that great, great grandmother wore. The garnets are real and set in solid gold. 6.50

"To Abigail from Abner"

said the card that accompanied just such a brooch in 1860. The vogue of the garnet brooch is with us again—just as the quaint neckline of that bouffant period. Genuine garnets set in solid gold. 10.50

The daughter of a very old family opens her jewel-case and finds therein her garnet bracelet—a family heirloom. If, perchance, your jewel-case lacks one, you may still attest your venerable lineage by wearing this lovely red circlet upon your white arm. 12.50

The Garnet

is said to resemble the pomegranate seed (from which it derives its name), but in this quaint pin it most certainly resembles a beetle of gold and deep red. 12.50
